

Border Protection

By Tieto Security Services

The problem

Do you remember the first time you heard of hackers? Depicted as evil individuals who created malicious malware at nighttime. The fact is that today, hacking has grown to industrial scale in less regulated parts of the world. Hackers are regular people going to their jobs every day, just like you and me.

Not just the exponential increase in cyber criminality put new demands on security, but also the nature of doing business. Today, trust has become the most important asset for companies in the networked business environment. If your company is breached and loses personal data, it will most likely become a huge reputational loss. Furthermore, customers expect your services to be up and running 24/7. If a Distributed Denial of Service-attack (DDOS) strikes you and blocks your service, it might be enough for your customers to switch to a competitor. In order to beat the industrialized cyber criminals, you need to keep them at the border, far away from your valuable assets.
