The problem

When it comes to the future of cyber security, we are in for a perfect storm of challenges. On one hand, hacking becomes more lucrative as the world digitalizes. On the other hand, digitalization means complexity. Trends like the Internet of Things and mobile workforces open up endless opportunities for hackers. This puts completely new demands on your security.

Traditional security not ready for the future

80% of security information is distributed by manually compiled spreadsheets today.¹ In the future, this way of sharing information will fall short when the digital environment becomes more complex.

No actionable insights with this approach
